Profile

Ariana DeLay OTD, OTR/L received her bachelor's of science degree from Wayne State University in Detroit, MI. She later pursued her Doctor of Occupational Therapy degree at Huntington University in Fort Wayne, IN. While in graduate school, she gained extensive experience in outpatient hand therapy and orthopedics, as well as neuro-based settings focused on rehabilitating traumatic brain injuries and spinal cord injuries.

Ariana enjoys working with a variety of upper extremity orthopedic impairments, with a keen interest for hand trauma. She is passionate about orthopedic research and has co-authored two research publications focused on upper extremity pathologies. Ariana is dedicated toward providing the utmost evidence-based and individualized care to each of her patients.

While in her free time, Ariana enjoys exploring the city, trying new restaurants, and hanging out with family and friends.
